Road Being Mapped Between La Grande and Here by Expert

WORK CARRIED OUT UNDER DIRECTION OF UMATILLA COUNTY AUTO CLUB.

Under the direction of the Umatilla County Automobile Club, R. A. Woodall, representative of the Auto Road Book Publishing Co. of Chicago, is today making a road map between Pendleton and La Grande. Driven by Ed Barr and Manager Burns of the City Auto Co. and accompanied by Secretary C. K. Cranston of the Commercial association, he left this city shortly after 8 o'clock this morning.

Mr. Woodall is making a tour of the west for the purpose of making road maps which will be published by his company. He came west via the Yellowstone trail to the Puget Sound and is returning by way of the old Oregon trail.

From Seattle he came over the Snoqualmie Pass through Ellensburg, crossing the Columbia at Pasco and going from there to Walla Walla. He came from Walla Walla to Pendleton yesterday and met President Ritter of the automobile club who arranged to take him on to La Grande.

The La Grande automobilists will take him on to Baker.

Mr. Woodall has been on the road for six years making road maps for his company and there are a dozen or more others employed on the same purpose. Eventually the company plans to have accurate maps of the whole country for use of auto tourists.

Recently a road log was made of the Pendleton-La Grande trip and the same route followed then is being followed today so that there will be no conflict. Mr. Burns took along with him signs which will tell the traveler that he is on the road to La Grande.

SLEEPING ON THE SIDEWALK BETTER THAN BEING IN WARSAW NOW

This is only one family which was found sleeping on the sidewalk of an East Side street in New York. Above the tenement reeked steam and odors in it. Sleep there was impossible. Mrs. Winkowski took her little brood out to the sidewalk. Even there they found hardly a breath of air.

"But this is better than being in Warsaw today," said she when the flashlight awoke her.

dam across the John Day river, four miles from Dayville, has been completed by United States engineers, who have been working on the project during the last few weeks, and before long work will be started which will make the town of Dayville a thing of the past.

Borings have been made along the bed of the river at what is known as Picture Gulch, and bedrock, on which the foundations of a huge irrigation dam may be laid, has been found at a depth of 25 feet.

The artificial lake which will be formed when the government project is completed will have a surface area of 200 square miles, and will in all probability cover the spot where the town of Dayville now stands. Water, which in the spring usually goes to waste, will be conserved, and in the arid months which follow will be doled out when it is most needed.

It is estimated that the waters so conserved will be sufficient to irrigate 250,000 acres of land in the Columbia river basin.

Charles T. Laird of Massachusetts, won in a sharp fight for grand inside guard over E. S. H. Winn of British Columbia. A. B. Duncan, St. Joseph, Mo., Mason Reiff, Marion, Ind., Frank Mullen, Seattle, and Victor T. Pierce, of Ashland, Wis., were named trustees.

Savannah, Ga., won over Minneapolis, Minn., and Scranton, Pa., for the place of holding the 1916 grand asie.
